Planned Parenthood's claims absurd

From Randy Lund
Dubuque, Iowa

"Some truth there was, but dashed and brewed with lies, to please the fools, and puzzle all the wise." So describes Planned Parenthood's recent full-page advertisement in the TH. Lies with a dash of truth, brewed in a stew of clever politics. Do not be duped.

Is there any thinking human being who believes that supporting Planned Parenthood will end abortion? Or even reduce it? Ridiculous. Killing unborn human beings is one of its most lucrative profit centers.

Is there any thinking human being who believes Planned Parenthood is about prevention? Planned Parenthood is a billion-dollar business that has been pushing pills for decades while teen pregnancy, single parenthood and sexually-transmitted diseases continue to rise. What does it prevent? It prevents nothing. Its low or non-existent behavioral standards enable the conduct that causes the very social problems it claims to prevent. What a deal! It generates its own business.

Its claim that being "pro-choice means being pro-child and pro-family" is absolutely absurd. Promoting and advocating for a "choice" to kill the unborn is pro-child? Yeah, right. And the family has really flourished in Planned Parenthood's culture, hasn't it? Get out your wallet.

It claims to be telling us the "truth." Preposterous! The truth would put it out of business.
